
1. The consolidated issue list

P0. Launch blockers

These four issues have to be resolved before the site can go live

Number	Issue	recommendatoin
1	Yalla Sprint is completely missing	Build a full Sprint page and add a clear entry point to it from the homepage. The page should explain what the Sprint is, apply the Diagnose to Scale process to the cohort itself, state the terms plainly (@1200 + 2% success fee, with no equity), show the dates, include a countdown to the 31 July, and carry an application form. Use the Sheraa S3 programme page and the Y Combinator apply first layout as models.
2	Only one general call to action, which reads Start a conversation	Use two consistent buttons across the whole site. The main one should say Apply to Yalla Sprint. The secondary one should say Book a call. If you would like to keep Start a conversation as the label for the advisory path, that is fine, but the Sprint application has to be the most prominent button on the site.
3	No pricing or terms shown anywhere	Publish the Sprint terms in full on the Sprint page, and give a sense of the price range on the service pages.
4	No proof of results	Add three to five anonymised outcome cards, for example a line such as helped a Series A software founder defend a seven figure valuation during due diligence. Add a short credential strip near the top of the page, and include the line about working under confidentiality as a way of building trust.

P1. Fix before driving traffic

These issues will not stop a launch, but they should be sorted out before we start actively sending founders to the site.

Number	Issue	recommendation
5	The positioning reads like an advisory firm only	Lines such as tell us where you are and we will help you find the clearest route forward are the language of a consultancy. Nothing on the page says venture studio or cohort. Rebalance the hero and the order of the sections so that the studio and programme identity comes first, and advisory sits as the second path. This matches the two buyer structure we agreed.

Number	Issue	recommendation
6	The years of experience figure is inconsistent	The site says 18 years, while our strategy materials say around 20. Choose one figure and use it everywhere on the site.
7	SEO and rendering still need to be confirmed	The placeholder metadata on the production shell was the single biggest finding in both earlier reviews. Please confirm that the staging build ships with page specific titles and descriptions, uses server side rendering or pre rendering, includes structured data, and pairs the name with a descriptor, for example Yalla Startup, Venture Studio, so we stand apart from the other brands using the Yalla name.
8	The conversion tools are not built yet	There is no application form, no scheduler, no downloadable resources, and no email capture. Every funnel in our strategy ends in a tool that does not yet exist on the site. Please build an embedded Sprint application that also shows what happens after someone applies, in the Sheraa style, a calendar embed for booking calls, and at least one gated resource that captures an email address.
9	The regional signal has been weakened	The line based in the UAE, working with founders globally should be changed to name the United Arab Emirates and Saudi Arabia directly.

P2. Polish

These are the final touches. None of them is serious on its own, but together they lift the quality of the finished site.

Number	Issue	fix
11	On mobile, the sticky header overlaps the content as you scroll. In the screenshots the biography text collides with the header area.	Test the scroll behaviour on iOS Safari and add top padding or scroll margin beneath the fixed header.
12	There are contrast and accessibility risks. Lime text on cream, and coral text on cream, may fail accessibility standards at small sizes.	Run a contrast check. Keep the lime and coral colours for large display text only and set body text in the dark ink colour.
13	The hero button that reads Explore the deliverables is weak. It points at deliverables rather than outcomes, and it competes with nothing.	Once the two main paths exist, move this down to a smaller in page link.

Number	Issue	fix
14	The service names have drifted. The staging site shows Go to market strategy and revamp and Business plan, whereas we agreed on Strategy Revamp and a five-service menu.	This is not fatal, but please settle on one final list of service names, and match the menu, the web addresses, and the metadata to it before any SEO work begins.

2. The corrected page structure

The final column says whether each section already exists and should be kept, needs changing, or is new and has to be built.

Order	Section	Status
1	Hero. From big ideas to investable, with the two paths, Apply to Yalla Sprint and Book a call, and a countdown strip to the thirty first of July.	Change. Keep the headline, add the two paths and the countdown.
2	Proof bar. A credential strip showing the two founders, their qualifications, their years of experience, and their background in Big Four and banking.	New.
3	Yalla Sprint block. What it is, the process, the terms, the dates, and the apply button.	New. This is the critical addition.
4	The Core Four services, which is the existing Four outputs section.	Keep.
5	Stay in Motion. The Fundraising support and Virtual CFO cards.	Keep, and add a sense of the price range on the Virtual CFO card.
6	How We Work. The Diagnose, Build, Ready, Scale process.	Keep.
7	Outcome cards, with the line about working under confidentiality.	New.
8	Meet the Founders, the existing section.	Keep, and use the agreed years of experience figure.
9	Final call to action. Ready to make the business make sense but split into the two paths.	Change.
